Stealth Bombers, Stealth Tanks, Stealth Ships, Stealth Guns, Stealth Armor, Stealth Viruses, Stealth Tax, Stealth Mode, Stealthing, etc as more undeniable evidence of the “mind of the average viewer/reader” and “popular acceptance” of the word stealth.

Once again the following are not simply called secretive bombers, secretive tanks, secretive ships, secretive guns, secretive viruses, secretive taxes, etc because they are types of secretive behavior – they are hunting, infecting, attacking

Stealth mode

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This article is about company behavior. For military anti-detection measures, see stealth technology.

In business, stealth mode is a company's temporary state of secretiveness, usually undertaken to avoid alerting competitors to a pending product launch or another business initiative.^{[1][2]}

When an entire company is in stealth mode it may attempt to mislead the public about its true company goals. For example, it may give code names to its pending products.^[2] It may operate a corporate website that does not disclose its personnel or location. New companies may operate under a temporary "stealth name" that does not disclose its field of business. To enforce stealthy behavior, companies often require employees to sign non-disclosure agreements, and strictly control who may speak with the media.^[2]

At the in-company level, a stealth mode can also refer to a new project or idea that is kept secret, not just from external parties, but also from internal stakeholders in order to avoid a (premature) dismissal of the idea. Key behaviors can include soliciting informal project sponsors, engaging in covert testing of the concept, freeing up extra resources and building a "cover story" for the project.^[3]

A stealth product is a product that a company develops in secret, while a stealth company is a new company that avoids initial disclosure as to its existence, purpose, products, personnel, funding, brand name, or other important attributes. The term stealth innovation has been applied to individual projects and ideas that are developed in secret inside a company.^[3]

Stealth mode is secretive business tactics against the competition that obeys the popular saying/battle metaphor "business is war".
